

The Stump

The runt of the woods standing so regal, without arms, color, nor limbs.

Just a lonely old grump bearing dirty brown rings of age.

A splintered fracture of your former glory,

Standing stationary against the drafts of the wind.

A perching post. A generous host to birds and bugs alike;

Giving you purpose in your new retirement.